

Speaker Information

Two business consultants have partnered to author a book on the pain of loss and the power of resilience. For She Who Grieves: Practical Wisdom for Living Hope intricately weaves stories of grief, loss, and hope with research to raise awareness, consciousness, and connection.

Turning uncomfortable challenge into positive change is something these women know how to do, as they are experienced coaches, trainers, and consultants by profession and strive to make a difference in people's lives, whether work or personal.

With For She Who Grieves: Practical Wisdom for Living Hope, they advocate that in grief there is growth, and focus on grief as something that helps us grow wiser and more resilient in business and life. There are ways to work with grief that have a positive impact.

The Creators

Amy Hooper Hanna

"We empower people with innovative insight and ideas to feel better. We believe it's important to raise consciousness and connection around grief and hope and the realness of life – it elevates us all as humans."

Holly Joy McIlwain

"I've walked with grief for many miles now. Because of this book, I've looked at my sons and my husband differently. Listening to other people's losses has caused me to love more deeply in my own home. I want to be a more grateful person."

About the Book

What if we focused on grief as something that helps us grow wiser and more resilient?

What if we could embrace grief?

At least hold its hand?

Look at it closely?

This is a book about good grief.

For She Who Grieves: Practical Wisdom for Living Hope is a collection of stories on the effects of grief and what comes next. It's about steps taken and the power and challenge that can be found on the road from sadness to joy, between grief and relief.

This book – and the speaking engagements – are for the brave-hearted and open-minded.
